

Seminar template document

Tony Roberts

University of Southern Queensland

July 1, 2004

Contents

1	Use standard LaTeX	3
2	Introduce to the table of contents	4
3	Conclusion	6

1 Use standard LaTeX

The great advantage of the seminar style is that you use standard  $\text{\LaTeX}$  commands.

Just force a new slide by using the command `\newslide`.

However, in this template I redefined `\section` and `\subsection` so they automatically start a new slide—this is good practise.

2 Introduce to the table of contents

I use the table of contents to overview the talk.

Thus, make each section title a short statement.

3 Conclusion

Three rules of public speaking: Be forthright. Be brief. Be seated. (S. Dressel & J. Chew, 1987)